

SEEN HERE AND HEREABOUTS BY THE TIMES' STAFF OF CAMERA MEN THIS WEEK

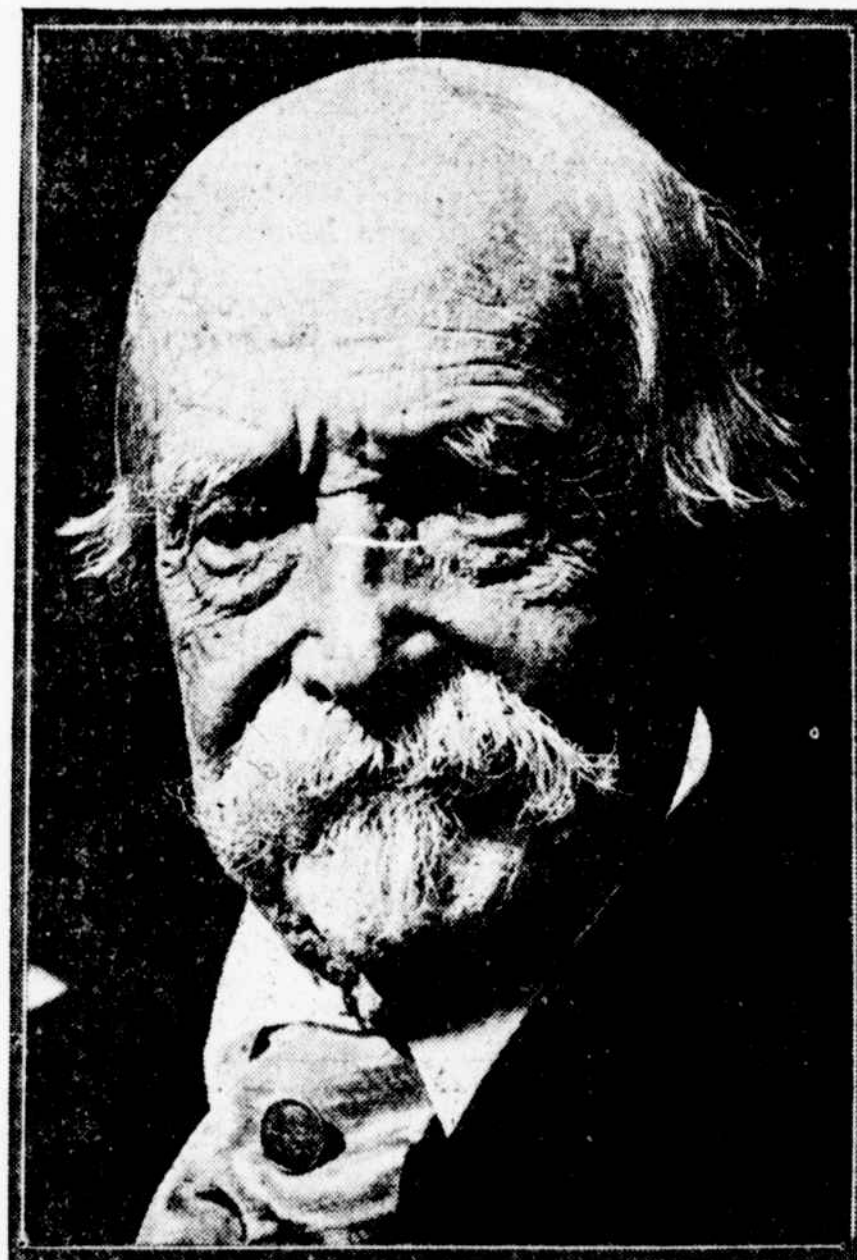

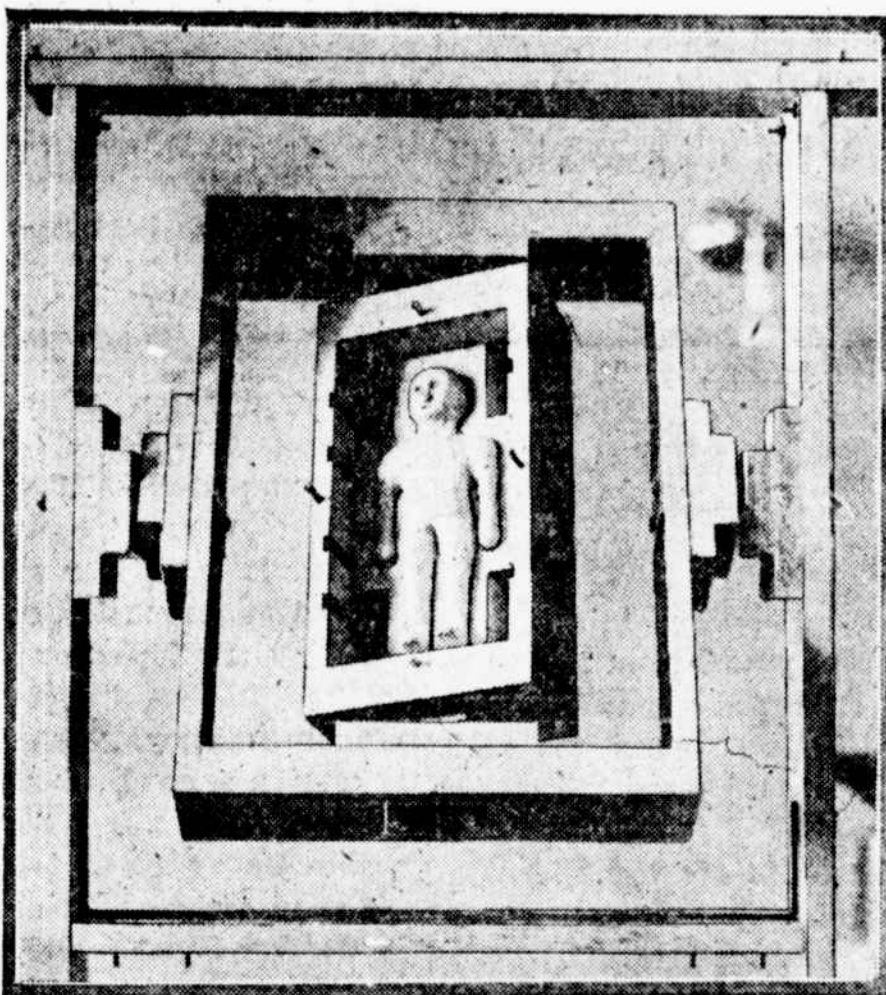

MISS MARIE SIMS has learned that being secretary to District Commissioner Louis Brownlow is almost as big a job as running a Peace Conference (1919 model). She has resigned and will sail shortly for England for a long rest. Miss Sims is the daughter of Congressman Thetus Sims of Tennessee.

NO WONDER the National Capital Horse Show, which came to an end yesterday, was popular. Photos above show some of the most striking scenes of the show. Society gathered from all parts of the East to participate in the function, which was the most successful yet held.

IF HE GETS YOU in time, Dr. Anthony A. Barry, Chastleton apartments, says he can restore you to life by means of his new invention. The machine shown at right is for use to revive the dead. It starts fluids in motion and causes the heart to pump.

SOME FISH! This big rock fish caught near Alexandria Friday, weighed thirty-five pounds. At the Eleventh street wharves, where it was sold to the Metropolitan Club for last night's dinner, fishermen said it was the largest rock fish ever seen here.

THREE COLLEGE MEN got into politics early, and between them made $10,000 in the National Republican Committee's suggestion contest just ended. Carl Smith (top), Springfield, Mass., won first prize of $5,000; Howard B. Wilson (center), Philadelphia, won second prize of $3,000, and W. P. Smith (bottom), son of Congressman J. M. C. Smith, Michigan, won third prize of $1,000. Truxton Beale donated the prizes.

HORATIO G. GIBSON (at left), 2015 N street northwest, celebrated his ninety-third birthday yesterday, but he was as active as ever when he entertained a number of old cronies at his home. He is one of the three surviving veterans of the Mexican war, and is the oldest living graduate of West Point.

GIVEN UP FOR DEAD, Sgt. John McGone (below), aged seventy-five, and fifty-four years in the Army Signal Corps, was recently discovered in Porto Rico. He arrived in Washington Friday and is now spending his last days at the Soldiers' Home.

ARMIN W. RILEY (below), head of the "flying squadron" of the Department of Justice, has been chasing high prices of clothing, and Attorney General Palmer has made him an assistant-attorney general and turned him loose on sugar prices.

JOHN PHILLIP SOUSA is as much at home pointing a gun at a covey of birds as he is wielding a baton before his famous band. He was the guest last week of the American Trap-Shooting Association at its tournament near Washington.
